

J exploring the drill

J, you were excited to come and do some woodwork this morning. You feel confident using a hammer and nails, so were happy to select which items you wanted to hammer into the wood and got started.

You had seen me showing some other children how to use the drill and were keen to have a go yourself. You really enjoyed moving the turning handle round and round and experimented with how to grip the main handle. You concentrated for a long period of time and then wanted to try the other drill. The drill was the same but you enjoyed practising your new skill!

You were laughing and giggling as you turned the handle and I could see you liked making holes in the wood.

You were engaged in purposeful work for at least 10 minutes. You didn't talk much but I could see how hard you were concentrating.

I wonder what you're going to make next in woodwork and look forward to you learning more skills!
